

Sharing Graded Work

Students can determine when, how and with whom they share their own graded tests and assignments. Some courses include group projects and assignments and the instructor may provide feedback (e.g. a grade or written comments) on a single copy that is returned to the group. If you choose to share your groups' grade with other members of the class, please obtain your groups' permission before doing so. If your group mates do not want their work shared, please respect their privacy and do not share the assignment. If you anticipate problems with these types of assessment strategies, please discuss your concerns with the course coordinator immediately.
